Everyday Conundrums

Tuesday, November 10 · 12:40 p.m.

Fox Commons, Business and Entrepreneurship Center

None of these is a scandal. Each is an ordinary moment at work where loyalty, generosity, discretion, fairness, and ambition can pull against each other.

1 Hiring a friend
You pick someone you know over a stronger applicant because you trust them and want to help.

2 Inside knowledge
You act on information that is legal to use but that your profession expects you to keep confidential.

3 A head start
You tell a friend about an opening before anyone else hears of it.

4 Interview help
You coach a candidate when you already know the exact questions they will face.

5 Taking credit
Your supervisor praises you for work a quieter colleague mostly did, and you let it stand.

6 Covering for someone
You hide a coworker's mistake because they once covered for you.

7 Better numbers
You report the favorable results and leave out the inconvenient ones.

8 Promising too much
You assure a client your team can deliver before asking the people who will do the work.

9 Making an exception
You extend a deadline for someone whose situation you understand, and hold everyone else to the original deadline.

10 Accepting a favor
You take tickets or a dinner from someone whose proposal you will later judge.

11 Passing work down
You hand an intern the tasks you dislike and call it a learning opportunity.

12 Always on
You answer messages late at night to help your team and set an expectation others cannot meet.

13 Staying silent
You let a demeaning joke pass because the person telling it controls your next opportunity.

14 A generous recommendation
You overstate someone's abilities because you care about them and they need the job.

15 Someone else's story
You tell a vivid workplace story that makes a colleague recognizable without naming them.

16 Leaving at a hard time
You take a better offer, knowing your departure will burden colleagues who backed you.

Before you arrive

Name: _____

1. Compass. A time your ethics guided a choice about work, school, or a team.

2. Conundrum. A time you could not avoid letting someone else down, or yourself.

3. Crucible. A time doing the right thing cost you something.

4. The cases. Pick one case from the primer (The Coaching Intern, Full Disclosure, Scholarship Application). What would you do, and why?

5. Name your ethics. Circle the corner closest to you today and say why.

RESULTS FIRST

6. Ethics at work. Pick one from the primer: the smile, the effort, the iced coffee, or who you work for (Oshkosh). Where do you stand, and why?

7. Everyday conundrums. Which of the sixteen have you already faced? Write each number and one sentence on what you did.
